MOSCOW, Jan 8 (NYT) .--Shaggy-haired Soviet youths who have been struggling to keep their hair long despite angry stares, hostile school of-ficials and puzzled parents, have. won a concession from the country's No. 2 law-enforcement official. No matter how awful they may look, he said, they are not breaking any law and should not be arrested. A letter printed in this week's issue of Literaturnaya Gazeta by Mikhail P. Malyarov, first deputy procurator-general, was a reply to a complaint voiced by a girl who reported that her boyfriend, a hard-working, sober 24-year-old, had been selzed on the street simply because his long hair looked suspicions to anthorities.

As he was waiting for a bus, she said, two "chunteer policemen, known as "druzhini," took him to their headquarters and tried to make him consent to having his hair cut. When he refused, she said, they turned him over to the regular poNone Other Than No. 2 Policeman lice who grilled him for several hours before letting him go The girl asked that neither her name nor that of her boyfriend be printed, and the city, in which the incident happened was not disclosed. The rising popularity of long hair among youth and the lack of tolerance toward the phenomenon by much of the older population have become lively topics of conversation here. But they have not been discussed much in the press

Long-haired young men, often carrying guitars, are not an uncommon sight these days, but older people tend to regard them as "uncultured" just as they frowned upon such Western "imports" as the twist and the miniskirt when they made their appearance here. Schoolteachers have been reported to be particularly unhappy with the new hair styles. The press has reported cases of youths being sent home because of the length of their hair

Geoffrey Jackson

Mr. Malyarov, asked to comment on the latest incident, indicated that he personally was not in favor of long hair but that the law had its limits. He said: "Yon can ask, what should be done if a citizen has not broken any law, but comports himself in poor taste, and insults esthetic feelings and rules? Must we really do nothing? Of course not, But the measures that are taken must be exclusively educational. You must first convince him. It is possible to make fun of him in the city newspaper, to report on him at his place of work, to call a Komsomol meeting. "But no one has the right to turn a person over to the police only because someone does not like his appearance," Mr. Malyarov emphasized,

Like most Western fads, long hair was slow to reach the Soviet Union. For several years, cartoonists mocked Western youth when they wanted to show bourgeois decadence. But a steady stream of long-haired tourists, the scenes of the outside world shown on television, the adulation of long-haired rock groups by Soviet youth, had an eventual effect.

Recently, the newspaper of the Ministry of Education's Uchitelskaya Gazeta noted that many teachers were having trouble keeping their students' hair in line at a length considered proper. The solution offered the teachers was to invite tha local barbers to come to the school and show students how to keep their hair nest.

Congress' Time for Reform Is Now

needed rest between the turbulent end of the 91st and the uncertain beginning of the 92d on Jan. 21, demands for reforms are filling the air. The seven filibusters in the Senate during the last days of the 1970 session were too much for even a longsuffering public to swallow. The country is painfully conscious also of the fact that much of the most vital legislation considered last year falled because of antiquated rules and customs in both houses. The pile of unfinished business that will have to start afresh in the 1971 session includes the Social Scourity and welfare bills, aid for desegregation, revenue-sharing, draft reform and the proposed constitutional amendment for direct election of the President.

In the face of widespread demands for action, Congress played games and tied itself into ridiculous tangles, As Sen. Mathias has pointed out: "The Senate floor, like Alice'e Wonderland, was a topsy-turvy place where you had to run faster and faster to stay where you were and where the unexpected was to be expected at any moment." The outcome was such a blow to public confidence that both houses are faced with the pecessity of mending their rules in the new session as a means of restoring public confidence.

The chaotic happenings of the last month were no accident; nor can the blame be heaped upon any individual leader or committee. Rather, they represent an institutional failure. Congress allowed the makings of a legislative crunch to build np throughout the session and had absolutely no means of controlling the situation when the final showdown came after the Christmas recess, The leaders of the Senate could not bring order out of bedlam because that body has steadfastly refused to give them the tools of responsible leadership.

In our view the new Congress ought to meet this critical problem head on. There is no reason to believe that the performance of 1971 will be any better than that of 1970 unless the conditions under which Congress operates are improved. The time has come for Congress to put its own house in order. The country cannot afford to risk further surrender of power to the executive because the legislative branch insists on following outworn practices devised in a less complex century for a small agricultural country.

Probably the most pervasive deficiency afflicting both houses is the seniority system. Both houses allow their committee chairmen to dominate the legislative process, and these key men are chosen by the blind operation of seniority. If an incompetent in a back-

As members of Congress take a much- woods district can get himself elected over a long period, he is certain to become the chief keeper of the legislative gate in a vital area of policy-making. And he may well occupy that powerful position after age has sapped his awareness of what the country at large is thinking and doing,

Some inadequate proposals have been made in both the Democratic and Republican parties in the House for changes in the seniority system. It is evident to every student of the problem that they fall short of what is desirable. It is our hope that leaders on both sides of the Capitol will see that basic reforms and not mere poultiees are needed.

Another critical problem that came into sharp focus in the closing days of the 91st session is unrepresentative conferees. This defect is closely related to seniority because the almost invariable practice is to name the oldest committee members in point of service as conferees. Frequently they are not representative of the Senate or of the House, as the ease may be. The furor over the SST was complicated by the fact that a majority of the Senate conferees, who favored building the supersonic transport plane, simply ignored the position the Senate had taken in opposition to it. Opponents of the SST then felt compelled to filibuster to counteract this abuse of seniority, thus deepening the quagmire resulting from antiquated rules.

In many respects the filibuster is the most intolerable carryover from an easy-going and uncomplicated past. As it now operates, it not only prevents Congress from getting its work done. Again and again it results in minority decisions because a few senators ean kill vital measures by long-windedness. Unlimited debate has become only another name for frustration and defeat of the will of the majority. It is an undemocratic practice which threatens to drag our entire system into disrepute.

In our view the time has come to take this choke off the neck of representative this choke off the neck of representative NEW YORK-Don't look now, government regardless of any fillbuster that New but the 1972 American presimay be launched to save the filibuster. Sen. Mansfield is ready to demand a new cloture rule when the Senate meets, and he ought to have a tidal wave of support from the country. We think the outlook would be far more promising, however, if he would go all the way and ask for a rule that would let a majority of the Senate decide when time-wasting debate should end.

The new Congress has the best opportunity in many years to put aside its outworn gimmicks and to transform itself into the responsible legislature that it ought to be. THE- WASHINGTON POST

On questionably be under exclusive So-instruction, Bergus asked President viet control. One is the big base Sadat about the new naval base Bergus asked about, et the sing the Sovieta are building at Mersa Matrub.

The former Egyptian line, and the former Soviet line as well, was always to poch-poch, to minimize, indeed to lie about the Soviet military presence in Egypt. But this time, Sadat was reasonably forthright. The Soviets, he said, had done so much for his country that Egypt could not deny them any facilities they required,

In such cases, and especially with such people, the transition from claudestinity and untruth to openness and frankness is always of very great importance. It means that a new slipation, once regard-ed as temporary and potentially reversible, has come to be regarded as permanent and preversible. And in this case, it means that the new Soviet imperialism has entered a quite noval phase.

The Soviet threat to Israel, only deferred by the talks that have now opened, is of course part of the pattern of this new Soviet imperialism. Recently, for instance, the chief Soviet partisan in the Egyptian junta went to Moscow to discuss more Uss more generous military aid for Egypt. In a subsequent report to his government, All Sabry boasted of bringing home the bacan in a big way. The most interesting published passage in his official report was the following:

The Soviet leaders expounded of Egypt and Syria, the ever-growat length their assessment, of the conflict in the Middle East, and ing Soviet Navy has further acquired the right to use further acount-ed the right to use the Red Sea, ports of all the countries above named, plus Mogadiscio in Soma-liland, Mrs. Bandanaraike's sucits place in the world strategy of the Soviet Union."

Hence it is time to give the widely ignored evidence for the quite new Soviet imperialism, which is altogether different from anything seen in the past. Since the end of World War II, with a single exception, the Soviets have never before sought to control territory. or to obtain bases beyond the borders of their existing empire. By conferring with Premier Golda Meir and other government leaders in the Israeli capital, Mr. Jarring will have instantly raised the negotiations to the highest level, bypessing the time-consuming process of relaying proposals between lower-level delegates at United Nations headquarters and decision-makers at home.

Mr. Nixon has a response to everything: m the economic field he is going quite simply to do the opposite of what he has been doing so far. He is going to revive expansion by appropriate measures. Peace? What peace? Not necessarily that of the world. In any case, not the one which the Vietnamese people dream of. It will be a peace for the Americans, at least for those of them who do not make money out of the war. Mr. Nixon already declares himself very satisfied with the results of his Vietnam policy, which, he says, is his best achievement. He indeed confesses that, when he entered the White House, he hoped to end the war within two years. At that time he probably had illusions about his chances of reaching a negotiated agreement with Hanol. Now, he obviously has none left. In an hour's time on the air, he did not make any reference to the Paris talks. But he warned the North Vietnamese once again that he would from now on respond to any attempted counteroffensive in the South by bombing military objectives on their own territory. But will this be sufficient? One of his four talking pertners asked: What will happen if the Communists nearly all American ground combat units have gone? Mr. Nixon refused to answer.

How much are the attacks on Jews in Poland attributable to wartime rivalry between the Communists who worked from Moscow (many of them Jews) and those who stayed in Poland? How much does anti-Semitism go hand in hand with anti-Americanism, nourished by Israel's evident dependence on America for money and arms?

Mideast Agony

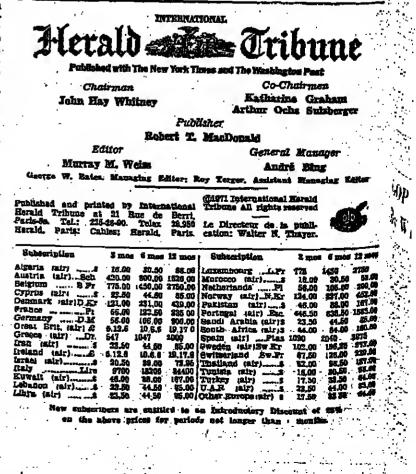

In his article of Dec. 28, Mr. James Reston is misleading his readers on the Middle Eastern crisis. He wrote that Israel is "enveloped by hostile Arab states -Lebanon and Syria... Iraq... Jordan... Egypt, Yemen and Saudi Arabia in the south-2.4 million Jews against 80 million Arabsoutgunned by the arsenal of Communism." So permit me to correct his pre-designed mistakes.

Lebanon, Jordan and Saudi Arabia are armed by Western comand Yemen never participated in direct military action against Israel. However, Lebanon is always the target of Israeli attacks.

The population of the said countries is 58 million Arabs. It should the be noted that those Arabs lived in peace with the Jewish people before Palestine was conquered by the Zionists. All honest reporters know this fact.

Mr. Reston's Bible quotation is universal and by no means refers only to the "agony of the Jews.". It also refers to the agony of the Palestinian Arabs who are fighting against 12 million Zionista, who really make up the population of Israel but live abroad.

The Latest Paris Fad: Shorts in Mid-Winter

By Hebe Dorsey

DARIS. Jan. 8.—Fashions and logic rarely go together. In subfreezing weather, the latest Paris fad is short chorts.

Brighte Bardot. Nathalie Delon, Elsa Martinelli, Sylvle Vartan, lots of long-legged models and now Madame Dupont are going around in shorts. Like exotic flowers, shorts first started blooming in hot nightclubs but soon moved to the streets with the largest quota in Saint-Ger-main-des-Prés cafés. Hairdressing stions, always eager to be a la mode, have already asked their staff to shed their midis Jean-Louis Saint-Roch and was first to put shempco girls in shorts.

Shorts' shapes vary con-siderably. Some ars tailored. sporty and the most popular devtime shorts are made of jersey, with a long, snug matching jackst. The overall effect is long and skinny. Others are softly flared and look like mini-skirts. One-piece shorts are zipped up in front. Some end in bloomers while others ars held by suspenders. Evening shorts are of black velvet or bright satins cheered up by pop patterns such as red hearts around the thighs.

Shorts ars so nutty to start with that ooe can wear any-thing with them: patterned

Last night, a girl dancing madly et Regine's really came out with the lot; black boots, bisck shorts, a pretty navel, a minuscule sweater holding (barely) a lot of bosom with ons single button, t. sombrero and cigarillo. American designers Mia and Vicky can be credited for having made the first shorts in Paris exactly one year ago. "They didn't sall too well at first." Vicky sald yesterday, "but now, shorts account for 75 percent of our sales. lovers came to watch Michel Perrodo, last year's even younger winner, hand over the trophy to Mr. Jarriges, who will display it until next January. The award is the creation of Marcel Grancher, founding editor of a little gastronomic quarterly called La Table et la Route, and is the only one of its kind. Mr. Grancher's idea began in Lyons before the war when this same trophy was ewarded to bistros that served good Beaujolais, which they say is one of the three rivers that wash the city, the other two being the Rhône and the Saône.

The prize moved to Paris after the war and while the emphasis is still on Beaujolais as the counter wine par excel-lence, it now serves more to single out bistros where all the wines are d'origine. 'Cinema is an art for which the outside world exists. It is a continuation of literature and painting---not an imitation, a continuation." -Eric Rohmer.

PARIS.-Probably the most respected film-maker now working in France is Eric Rohmer, whose "Le Genou de Claire" is currently playing in five Paris movie houses. Rohmer is not respected only in France: His "Ma Nuit chez Maud" was a surprise hit in the U.S. and just won him the New York Critics' prize for the best scenario of 1970. "I was certainly surprised," Rohmer says of "Maud's" success. He adds, giv-ing a good summary of all Rohmer films, "It's very French, full of allusions and the characters talk a lot.

)nv

Despite the samy Gay Parse title and the heroine's tendency to wrap herself, nucle, in a white fur rug, the night at Maud's is spent in high moral and religious dispute. It is the fourth film in a series that Rohmer calls contes moraux (moral tales). "Le Genou de Claire" (Claire's Knee) is the fifth; the final one, "L'Amour, l'après-midi," will be made next year.

Rohmer himself is intensely private, rarely quoted or photographed, anony-mous and, it has been said, pseudonymous as well, Jean-Claude Brialy, who stars in "Le Genou de Claire" (and who made his debut in Rohmer's 1956 16-mm. short, "La Sonate à Kreutzer"), says, "He is intelligent, cultivated, tender, authoritarian, secret and elusive. He has no telephone." A producer sharing Rohmer's temporary office near the Champs Elysées tries gently to warn that Robmer won't turn up for the interview: "He is very incognito," the producer

Rohmer does appear, on the dot. He is a tall man, said to be 50, with high, bony shoulders, small, neat features and a frizz of grey hair. His remoteness is genuine and deeply felt: occasionally he gives a direct glance or flushes pinkly when interested, but mostly he hunches up in pale profile, as if to disappear. Born in Nancy, he taught literature. then became a film critic and editor of "Les Cahlers du Cinéma" in the golden days when the other Cahlers critics were Truifaut, Godard, Rivette and Chabrol. "Being a critic helped me as a filmmaker in that it was a way of learning. of meeting people, of seeing old films." Rohmer says. "We were united, we encouraged cach other. The cinema was our only pleasure, our only concern."

created the famous politique d'auteurs which Truffaut now finds exaggerated. Rohmer disagrees "In polemics one always exaggerates," he says. "But I believe in the suteur theory. I like suteurs, not moresur choisis." Since 1959 Rohmer has made only six feature films ("Perhaps he'll only make ten films in his lifetime." Jean-Claude Brialy says, "but they will constitute an ocupre.") He is one of the few French directors to come to films via television, process common enough in the U.S. For television Rohmer did interviewa with such film-makers as Carl Dreyer. but mostly he worked on educational programs ranging from La Bruyère and Mallarmé to a study of the use of con-crete in architecture.

"For me television was a way of studying the relationship between text and image," Rohmer says, "The interviewa gave me the idea of doing films like interviews. It taught me how people react, and I learned from television not to use too many effects, to leave the camera immobile in front of the Speaker.

Rohmer's films are conversations in the best sense of the word. The listener is as important as the speaker, the words a true exchange. The balance between form and content is rigorous and beautiful in the French 17th-century style, there is none of the empty anateness of much French wit, "Je n'aime pas parler pour rien dire," one of his characters says.

Perhaps because of the feeling of a moral experience resulting from verbal games, Rohmer has been much compared to Marivaox. He is flattered but says he couldn't possibly quote one line of Marivaux and that anyway the comparison is wrong. 'It is more 19th century, more Proust than Marivaux," he says. "In the 18th century they cared more about the mechanics of the passions than their aged.

A year before filming of "Le Genou de Claire" began, Rohmer planted roses to be used in a flower-picking scene. They came up within a week of schedule. Shooting took only six weeks, but the preparation was long. The young new-comer Béatrice Romand had a year of conversation with Rohmer before getting the script. Aurora Cornu, a Romanian writer who plays a Romanian writer named Autors, says her tole was based on five years of friendship with Rohmer. "The theme of Rohmer's films is temptation temptation mastered by people of good intentions," Miss Oornu says. "Rohmer thinks people are good, he believes in reason." "They are good in the sense that if they weren't sympathetique or interestin I wouldn't bother," Rohmer says. "I like people who are morally aware, who question. The bero is usually someone who believes, who has principles. He learns that his system has holes in it and he has to defend himself."

Devised with geometric clarity. Roh-mer's six moral tales all deal with one man and two women. While the man is away from the first girl hc meets the second, and their encounter is the subject of the film. At the end of the film, the man returns to the first woman (in "Le Genou de Claire" the first woman. Brialy's fiancée, is seen only in a photo-The second woman is two siscraph, ters.).

Rohmer says that he came to filmmaking for philosophical reasons. "It was best for my temperament. While I am interested in literature, philosophy, music and painting. I need to remain near reality. Cinema is an art for which the outside world exists. It is a continuation of literature and painting-not an imitation, e continuation."

His films are low-budget and are easily amortized in France, leaving him with no financial pressures. He has no wish to work out of France: "For my kind of films, France is best, it is most receptive to unusual films. I am very French. I am only at ease in France and in the French language. "I couldn't work in a foreign country where I could only indicate what I want," Rohmer says. "After all, I am not a director. I am an author."

The Art Market French Auctioneers Keep Losing Ground

By Souren Melikian PARIS, Jan. 8.-For generations, Paris has shared the international art market with London to the practical exclusion of every other city in the world. The trends, in these two centers, during any one auction period have always been and will continue to he of international significance and the comparative statistics are a guide as to how the two cities are maintaining their relative hold on the buyingselling public. Until the early sixties, Paris was undisputedly shead of London. But now the picture has changed.

An opportunity to compare what has been happening across the Channel and in Paris is offered by the yearly review put out by Solheby's and Christie's (IHT, Jan. 2-3) and the "Guide 1971 Connaissance des Arts des Ventes Publiques en France" (1971 Connaissance des Arts Guide to Public Auctions), published by the French art magazine Connaissance des Arts. Despite its title, this profusely illustrated guide is less a prediction of things to come than a summing up of the past SCALSOT

As in the case with the Christie's and Sotheby'e surveys, the French report dwells on record prices and should be read with some caution. However, it is perhaps more realistic than its English counterparts because it was put together by an independent team of profes-sional journalists, headed by Francis Spar. Statistics reveals that the French auc-tioneers are steadily losing ground to their English colleagues. Sotheby's turnover, from July 31, 1969, to July 31, 1970, in London alone amounted to $60,854,741. The Sothebyowned affiliate in New York Parke-Bernet Galleries, recorded a final total of $38,354,419. Hence Sotheby's chalked up a turnover just under $100 mil-In contrast, the Paris turnover was $43,636,363-scarcely $5 million over that of the Manbeing sold in England, The same applies, perhaps to a les-ser degree, to Impressionist hattan Sotheby branch and less than half of Sotheby's total turnover. Christie's of London ters. The French prices clearly show that Paris is the place to had a turnover of $47,999,894. Add Christie's to Sotheby's and the English suctioneers accounted for nearly $150 million in the past season, Paris trailed London by almost 4 to 1.

Nor is the trend to London likely to be reversed this year Paris. As usual, paintings by old -at least if one accepts the view expressed in the French masters who cannot be given a guide that 1970 is a chie to 1971. While turnover at Chrishave been low in price. 9, 1969, and the Braque, June 10, 1970.

Despite giving ground English anctioneers in several categories, Parisians held their own in the field of tapestries -the best of which seldom cross the Channel. A set of four Renaissance tapestries from Flanders (IHT, Feb. 27, 1970) were sold for nearly $170,000 to a French industrialist who has already bequeathed them to a museum,

The price of antique silver went down in both Paris and London. The authors of the French guide admit to a 25 percent drop in price.

As far as antiquities are concerned, very early medieval objects are now well beyond the reach of the ordinary buyer either here or in London. For example, a Merovingian sword, sold for $23,000 on March 20, 1970, at Drouot, was preempted by the Musée des Antiquitès Nationales at Saint-Germain-en-Laye, Had it not been known, prior to the sale, that the French authorities would not allow it to leave that country, in view of its historic and artistic importance, this sword might very well have fetched four times that price.

Recent actors and actresses people love, and flock to see, tend to be miscastings have resulted in mangled classics and misbegotrefugees from the movies romantic ers, stars who failed ten revivals. Just opened at the Criterion to adapt to a changing medium, is Earthe Kitt (and who does but continued to command an not love Eartha Kitt?) in Henry James's play "The High Bid." It is difficult to understand the appeal to a production company of this play about a rich American lady descending upon an English stately home.

Three years ago, it was revived at the Mermald Theatre. Despite a strong cast, and a superb performance by Fenella. Fielding as the American, Mrs. Gracedew, the play was rarely more than trivial and tedious, and unbelievably wordy.

It is easy to understand the appeal of the play to an ac-tress. James intended it for Ellen Terry, although ans sensi-bly declined to perform it. He wrote a part that few actresses could resist. Mrs. Gracedew dominates the play, has all the best lines, and is the only character with any definition, the others being little more than necessary encumberances to cue her lines.

The new production, directed by David Crosse, will neither lease admirers of Henry James nor of Miss Kitt nor of both. The play has been considerably coarsened, with the actors uttering James's convoluted prose as if it were written by one of Bob Hope's scriptwriters Aided by a great deal of mugging and winking, they labor mightily to uncover a great deal of unfunny sexual innuendo that James never intended.

There has been an alteration to niessa Miss Kitt's fans. Tr the original, Mrs. Gracedew did not appear until the end of the first act. She now appears al-most as soon as the curtain rises. Miss Kitt looks delectable in Edwardian dress, as if she were about to serenade an oldfashioned millionsire, but, lika the rest of the cast, she does not attempt a period feeling or style.

She tends to approach her lines as if they were an obstacle course, rushing at them breathlessly and seeming a little surprised to reach their end unscathed. She finds room for her usual seductive routine, with many purrs and growls, hot, hampered by Henry James, her performance is nowbere near as entertaining as usual. ...

At the Young Vic. Misha Wil-Hams's "Byron - The Naked Peacock" has joined the repertory. The play is presented in a rehearsal atmosphere, which seems most appropriate since it has not found its final form. A mixture of documentary and unlikely dialogue ("I'm airaid I'm in the family way," says Lady Byron, announcing her pregnancy), it adds nothing to our understanding of the poet. This is mainly due to the treatment which, for no good reason, is a mixture of comicstrip and music hall, concentrating on Byron's sexual eccentricities. In blue jeans, Frank Barrie plays Byron as more Hopslong Casanova than club-foot poet. But Mr. Williams provides some neat jokes and an interesting construction that gives Byron two deathbed scenes, and has him clambering out of his coffin to give a lecture, illustrated with lantern slides, on the women in his life.

boast. In Paris as in London, the best work of so far underrated Impressionists and modern masters is selling far better than it was a few years ago. Le Yaouanc, Galerie Macght, 13 Rue de Téhéran, Paris, to Jan. 30.

Collages and three-dimen-sional works by 30-year-old Alain Le Yaouanc reveal the stylish elegance that earned him a show in this very dis-criminating gallery. Unfortunately his work is based on a body of conventions taken from the world of Max Ernst and which Ernst, at the time he was doing his collages, knew how to infuse with intensity and wit. Le Yaouanc has tam-ed Ernst for the middle class. Surely in 1970 a gifted young artist has better things to do. -MICHAEL GIBSON

Antonio Donghi: Rome Seen by a Roman

Everyone is straightbacked, proud of his station in life, also resigned to it. Placid, yet touched by mescapable fate, the faces are sad and funny. The mentality, clothing and attitudes of the sitters are observed leisurely and brought to just that point where everything in the picture is in tune and falls into place. As Tridenti wrote of Donghi: "He is not in a hurry... his people are not in a hurry ... in Rome they know that hurry is bad for you when you eat, when you drink, when you paint, when you wait for cus-tomers and for glory ... " Because of Donghi's stubborn independence of any school, he has been called a primitive, but has also been compared with a host of painters of all periods. You find the almond eyes of Raphael's "Fornarina" and the rosy flesh tints of Caravaggio in his young faces, and the muted golds and pale blues remind you of Wattean and the polish of Ingres. The enchanting way of telling stories is close to Donghi; there is even a resemblance to German

"Verism"-but not its acidity. The landscapes are smaller and less focused than the lifesize figure pieces. Dreamy, hazy greens offset a fountain and a curiously empty house. Domestic birds and still-lifes have a jewelbright finish, but are less individual.

Toward the end of his life, perhaps because of his bad health, Donghi's work suffered a decline, technique became' too prominent so that some of his work became stiff and stilted. But, at his best, Donghi was an unusual man: He watched the limited world before him with the steady wonder of a

AFTERMATH OF FIRE—Firemen survey the damage from a blaze of undetermined origin that wiped out a 44,000-square-foot warehouse and an estimated 76,600 tires at Pirelli's Milan plant late Thursday night. The tire and rubber giant said losses could run to "several hundred million lire" (or several hundred thousand dollars), but that regular shipments to Italian auto companies would be met from other stocks. Fist, for one, has admitted problems in recent weeks in getting enough tire and rubber supplies to keep production lines rolling, largely because of strikes.

Trading Volume Slows NEW YORK, Jan. 8.-Prices on the New York Stock Exchange drifted in a narrow range today with trading only moderately active.

Reductions of prime lending rates by commercial banks and of the Federal Reserve Board'e discount rate had only a fleeting impetus for the market. A depressing factor was the nibbling by profit-taking at the substantial price rises in recent sessions. Another was the news that unemployment climbed to 6

Trading moved at a substantial pace-14.10 million shares-but was well behind the level of the two previous sessions. Yesterday, turnover totaled 18.46 milion shares.

There are three points that should be made about this arithmetic sleight-of-hand:

To Be Replaced

It noted that the newly created Securitics Investor Protection Corp. (SIPC) would replace the trust fund, receiving unused fund assets. President Nixon signed SIPC into law Dec. 30.

The exchange said the liquidations of four housee had been completed, five others have been substantially completed and two more liquidations are under way or authorized.

In addition, $9.8 million was advanced to facilitate the transfer of the business and accounts of Hayden, Stone, to other houses. The $20 million trust fund expansion will enable the exchange. it said, to put up the $5 to $6 million that is expected to be needed to cover the liquidations of First Devonshire Corp. and Robinson & Co. and, if needed. Charles Plonn & Co. The balance of the $20 million will involve np to $10 million to complete liquidations already in progress and some $5 million more to cover unforeseen contingencies. Source of Funds

All of this additional money is expected to be raised without any more assessments on the membership, ince $15 million in tax refunds is being taken in by the exchange and other sums are available from its general funds. The $75 million fund total, comprising a substantial amount already expended, does not inande another $30 million being raised from membership assessments to indemnify Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith in its acquisition of Goodbody & Co. Since Goodbody probably would have toppled into liquidation without the Merrill Lynch takeover, the $30 million can be added to the $75 million to provide an indication of the ultimate loss exposure undertaken by the exchange membership.

How to place your portfolio under investment management starting with as little as $5,000

If the money you have today is to grow in the future toward more income, or for education, travel, leisure, retirement, it must be kept working full time to achieve your goals. Yet you may fied that you are actually losing ground due to inflation, taxes or lack of time for investment decisions. To help solve this problem, clients in 55 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management Plan. It has, we believe, proved especially efficient in providing cootinuing espital growth supervision for portfolios of from $5,000 to $50,000-on behalf of people who recognize and can share the risks and rewards of common stock. investments. The cost is modest, as low as $100 per year.

First World Series Night Contest Set for Game No. 4 in '71—Maybe

By Murray Chass

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (NYT). Seeking a bigger television audience, baseball and the National Broadcasting Company have decided to make one of the World Series games next fall into a night game.

The game-the scheduled fourth game of the Series on Wednesday, Oct. 13-would be the first Series contest played at night.

In making the announcement yesterday, commissioner Bowie Kuhn made no mention of the number of problems that could be created by the decision.

For example, if the Chicago Cubs win the National League pennant, the game would not be played at night (unless it were switched to another city, because the game is scheduled for the National League city and Chicago's Wrigley Field has no lights. The game also would not be a true night affair if the site is a West Coast city, because an 8 p.m. start in Los Angeles would mean an 11 p.m. start in the East. The game would more likely begin in the late afternoon-at 5 p.m., for example.

Then there are the problems of rain and extra innings. If the night game went 15 innings or so, would the next afternoon's game be pushed back from its scheduled 1 pm. start? At what point would that decision be made? What of a rain-out?

January White Sails Shown in Paris Suburb

PUTEAUX, France, Jan. 8 .- Three seals, two minks, sands from the beaches of Fontainebleau and 1,260 out of 1,300 boats were awaiting an audience this morning at the Palais de la Défense where the Paris Boat Show had its tenth annual opening.

Some boats were just never made to travel on France's auto-routes. At least, not when they're dependent on clummy old trailer trucks moving over snow.

Fortunately, the boat show runs through Jan. 18 and by that time, most of the missing vessels, now lost in a sea of anow somewhere hetween Paris and the Côte d'Azur, will be saved in time to be put on exhibition here in the Paris suburbs. Among the missing are a pair of Thirteens-the sloop 13-M.

scheduled to be the largest hull at the show, and the Rio-13. which was to have been the queen of the motor boats. The Rio-13, naturally 13-meters long, will not attempt the trip from Southern France to have. "The roads, the snow," said a shoul-dershrugging spokesman for the Rio of France boat company. The sloop 13-M should be here at the end of next week, -"It is moving very slowly," said a female spokesman of the Uginox boat firm. "It must come from the Rhône Valley where the snow is this high," and the lady held her hand to eye level,

Large boats have always been nice to look at in boat expositions but are usually only expensive curiousity items. This year's curiosity is the Volga, a Russian-made hydrofoll which sells for 33,000 francs ($6,000). It is the only hydrofoll nt the exhibition and the first time the Russians have been in the Paris show.

"When people come to look at the boats, they are surprised." said Aleg Koustov, a representative for the Suddingort Co. of Moscow, "They think we are all serious, all with beards. It is like propaganda," he said, talking about the various pleasures the Volga can give its purchasers. The hydrofoll, can reach speeds up to 60 kilometers an hour.

The Russians also have kayaks, canoes and skiffs-all racing boats used in Olympic competition—on exhibit. And they all made the voyage from the port of Batonmi on the Black Sea in the Soviet Georgian Republic to Paris on time.

But the boat shew-which has as many items as France's "drugstore"-is made up of more than boata. Every item in the palaie, though, has some sort of connection to the sea. A mink? The fat of minks is used to protect the skin from wind and sun. So, of course, there is a stand with mink pro-tector, mink shampoo, mink soap and mink stoles. (It can get cold on boats), all from a farm in Thinnery, 120 kilometers south

The sand from Fontainebleau is there so that children from age 12 to 15, can show their artistry with mud pies and other sculptures.

WASHINGTON - The great minds of the cigarette and advertising industries are hard at work trying to figure out nays of publicizing cigareties on television now that eigarette commercials have been banned.

The tobacco companies are aiready going a'head with plans to sponsor automobile races, bowling Buchwald tournaments, tennis matches and other sporting events. There is a rumor that pipe tobacco. which is oot banned, will be sold in packages bearing a st rtling resemblance to cigarette packages.

I recently attended a brainstorming session at an advertising agency where they were dicussing other methods of getting Cigarette advertising across.

The head of creative projects said, "I think we have an idea. We could sponsor a documentary on Winston Churchill titled Winstoo Ruled Good, Like a Prin - Minister Should, English teachers all over the country will compaly about the title and so, at the beginning of the show, we could show members of the British Perlinment asking whether people wanted good grammar or good taste in their documentaries."

there is any trouble. Ben tells Johnny. 'Call for Phillip and Morris.' "I like it." said the president of the agency. "Here's another TV series that might work," said the agency time buyer. "It's called Lucky Strike,' and it's about a mao who drills for oil in Texas. Every time he hits a well, he shouts, 'Lucky Strike means fine depletion." "I like it," said the presideot of the agency.

The head of research said, "We've found that the TV shows that young people watch the most have animals in them. Now our people have come up with a sure-fire series titled 'Camels Aren't for Everybody.' This is a story of a mao who owns a restless camel that keeps running away.

"Every week the man takes a mile-long walk looking for his camel. Along the way he has all sorts of humorous adventures, but at the end of the program he always finds his

"I like it." the presideot of the agency said.

The head of the TV departmeot said. "We also have a Mission Impossible type series on the drawing boards titled. You Can Take Salem out of the Country.' It's about a guy named Harry Salem who works for a patriotic organization known as SMOKE Harry goes all over the world saving the United States from evli. At the end of each show, his boss save to his secretary. You can take Salem out of the country, but you can't take the country out of Salem."

"I like it," said the president of the agency. "Anything else?" The head of media said. "We have a comedy series about two tail basketball players gamed Benson and Hedges. They've each scored 100 points in a game so everyone refers to them as Benson and Hedges 100s. The funny thing is they're so long they keep getting stuck in elevators and closets and taxicabs and sewers. They always get into mischief and the president of the university wants to expel them. He keeps saying all the time, 'On the disadvantages of Bensou and Hedges'." "I like it," said the president of the agency. "Send in Keot to put it all together."

By Harry Trimborn MOSCOW.-In the Soviet Unico there is a neat division of labor between men and women:

The women do the work and the men tell them how to do it. Like sweeping the streets, bricklaying, loading cargo ships, collecting garbage, building dams, digging ditches and mining coal.

In comparison with the status of Sovict women, both at home and on the job, the women's liberation movement in. the United States seems a commercialized and frivolous activity for women with too much time on their hands. The Soviet woman would hardly consider it a triumuh for her sex if she won admission to a construction labor union. Article 122 of the Soviet Constitution states: "Women in the U.S.S.R. are accorded equal rights with men ... the possibility of exercising these rights is assured by women being accorded an equal right with men to work, payment for work, rest and leisure. In short, the government maintains that the Soviet woman is a free spirit who can enter any occupation or engage in any cultural or personal activity that isn't either against the law or beyond her competence. About the only male "privi-lege" she lacks is that of being drafted into the army. There have been significant breakthroughs in the emancipation of Soviet. women under Soviet rule. A series of social laws has made life easier for both the marrieo and single woman, including those with children, born either in or out of wedlock. The days are gone in Russia when a woman had little more than the legal protection afforded harnvard animals.

Cosmonaut Vaientina Nikolayeva-Tereshkova is the world's first and only woman to undertake a space flight. An Aeroflot airliner is manned by an all-woman crew, including the pilot, copilot and navigator. The Soviet Union has the only soman conductor of a major, fulltime orchestra. There are women doctors, lawyers, judges, scieotists, engioeers and surveyors. But such achievements do not touch the great mass of the 130 millioo females in the Soviet Union's total population of 241 million. The figures show that there are 1.9 millioo more women than men in the Soviet Union, a legacy of two devastating world wars and a major reason women engage in work better suited for masculine muscles. But even after a quarter of a cectury of peace the women are still at it. They are still chainer, to the chores, which, is Lenin said in 1919, "crush, strangle, stultify and degrade her ... and waste her labor on harbarously unproouctive, petty, verve-wracking, stultify-iug and crushing orudgery." Lenin's words are echoed half a century later in the Soviet Union's own statistics emhedded in reports and articles and in the comments of concerned Soviet sociologists, psychologists and educators.

And evidence of them can be seen at virtually any street corner, construction site, farm or factory. For in practice the Soviet woman is a drudge whose work has given her face the complexion and texture of tanned cowhide and her fingers the look of raw carrots just pulled from. the ground. In an effort to supplement her family's income, she performs the most difficult and disagreeable chores required of a modern industrial society. Four-fifths of the approximately 60 million women in the Soviet labor force are engaged in what is officially termed. "nhysical labor."

On almost every job, she does the heavy operates the fork-lifts, mechanical dig-rise to positions of authority within the confines of her job or profession. Such places are usually filled by men. Although one of every two workers in the industrial labor force is a woman, there are six or seven men for every woman foreman or shop chief in industry.

It is no different in the professions. Women make up 85 percent of all medical personnel, yet only 50 percent of them ever become chief physicians or executives of medical institutions. Although the medical profession generally commands. prestige and high pay in the West, it. enjoys no such status in the Soviet Union. Starting salary of a physician, usually a woman, is only two-thirds that of a skilled worker.

Besides being at the lower end of the pay scale in each occupation, women also. as the textile industry. Men predominate the highest-paid occupations, such as engineering. The Soviet woman must also perform the more usual feminine tasks-like having bables, cooking, cleaning house, washing, ironing and buying the groceries.

Such chores might not seem formidable. to an American housewife who can cater, to her family's comfort and well-being at the touch of an appliance button. But for her Soviet counterpart, each of such chores is an enervating and time-consuming undertaking. She has few appliances in her cramped spartment. And those that she does have are probably not working properly hecause of shoddy con-

Although she might have been on her. feet for up to eight hours a day operatmore time waiting in line to hay the family groceries. A Soviet study shows that the average Moscow woman spends at least 50 percent of her off-work time shopping and cooking.

The old family ties, which made a woman literally dependent. upon her husband for her existence, have been loosened. Although there is little talk about it and cone of the commercis tion of it as in the West, sex is freer and divorce is easy. In fact, according to a United Netions study, the Soviet Union has a divorce rate of 2.73 per 1,000 persons, the highest in the world. More than half of Soviet divorce cases are started by women. Despite all her difficulties at home and on the job, the Soviet woman-does not worry about one facet of the battle of the sexes that seems to bother some American women-the fear that she might be considered merely a sex toy,

In fact, the Soviet woman would probably welcoms a little personal sex exploitation. As a 23-year-old Moscow woman put it when asked for her concept of an ideal man: "I would want a rich, generous man, who would smother me with presents and tenderness." O Los Angeles Times
